Live! Concert Series on the Plaza Returns for its 16th Season on the Woodrow Wilson Plaza

The daily lunchtime concert series is sure to delight hundreds of locals and tourists who visit the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center (RRB/ITC)

Washington, D.C. – Lunchtime at the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center just got more exciting. Trade Center Management Associates (TCMA), the group that manages the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center (RRB/ITC), presents the Live! Concert Series on the Plaza, which will feature an array of musical performances from all genres, including neo soul, classic rock, reggae, country, jazz and more.

Live! concerts will take place August 1 – September 30, Monday through Friday, from 12:00pm to 1:30pm on the Woodrow Wilson Plaza.

“The Live! Concert Series on the Plaza is one of many events we sponsor in order to bring the DC community together here at the building,” said John P. Drew, President and CEO of TCMA. “We want the Wilson Plaza to have a lively atmosphere where locals and tourists can enjoy themselves and take a break during the day.”

With plenty of outdoor seating, concert goers can pick up lunch on-site and go enjoy the show. The Plaza Bar is open Thursdays and Fridays, from 11:30am to 2:00pm and offers healthy meal options, like salads and sandwiches. Visitors can also grab lunch at one of the outdoor eateries located on the Concourse level or from one of the many food court vendors at the RRB/ITC. A complete list of food court vendors can be found here.

On Fridays through November 18, you can also check out Capital Harvest on the Plaza (CHoP), a weekly farmer’s market featuring fresh fruit and produce, sweets and prepared food.

Launched in 2000, the Live! series supports one of the Ronald Reagan Building's missions to establish a pedestrian link between the National Mall and the business district north of Pennsylvania Avenue, creating an open, active and inviting setting for the community.
